BTE and Harley-Davidson Motor Co. Co-Present on Function-Based Analysis at DMAA: The Care Continuum Alliance/ National Association Manufacturers Summit in September

Baltimore, MD and Denver, CO, - - -

Industry experts from BTE Technologies and Harley-Davidson Motor Company will co-present “Prevention and Management of Occupational Injury and Illness in Manufacturing, Utilizing Function-Based Analysis” at the Integrated Care Summit on September 9, 2008 in Hollywood, Florida. The Integrated Care Summit - the collaborative conference of the DMAA: The Care Continuum Alliance and the National Association of Manufacturers – is focusing on the theme of wellness, prevention and chronic disease management initiatives in the workplace this year.

Hiring your next injury is a real concern in today’s business environment. Across industries, 32% of workers injured annually have tenure on the job of eleven months or less. Identifying job candidates who cannot perform the physical demands of the job is good for the employer and employee; preventing injury and occupational illness associated with over exertion and musculoskeletal strain. This session will discuss Harley Davidson’s comprehensive Post Offer of Employment Testing Program and the value of this program structure in post injury recovery and return to work. Connie Miller, vice president of business development with BTE Technologies Inc, and Caroline O’Connell, occupational health lead for Harley-Davidson Motor Co., will discuss the key indicators that identify when this type of program is beneficial for employers, how Harley Davidson navigated the decision process, implementation strategies and benchmarking success.

Connie Miller leads BTE’s Employer Payer Services (EPS) development initiatives, working with employers and payers across industries to improve workplace injury, disability and manage a safe and productive return to work. Caroline O’Connell is the liaison between corporate and manufacturing sites for development, implementation and management of programs and processes related to health and wellness for Harley Davidson.

“Attendees will learn the key components to building a successful program while benefiting from the experience of a first rate employer like Harley Davidson,” said Connie Miller.

Both Ms. Miller and Ms. O’Connell will be available for individual meetings at the BTE Technologies Booth (Booth #218) during the show. To schedule a meeting or for more information, contact info@btetech.com.
